A Book of Maps for You by Lourdes Heuer

A child moves into a new house and discovers a surprise: a hand-drawn guidebook to his neighborhood created by the kid who lived there before. A heartfelt story, and a clever introduction to maps.

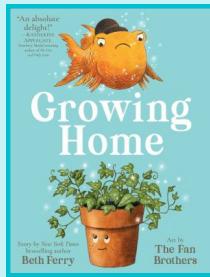

Cat Nap by Brian Lies

In this imaginative introduction to art history, a wily mouse guides a cat on a chase through time and geography by stepping into a museum print. It's a "pawsitively" clever way to explore art.

Piggypine by Richard T. Morris

Part porcupine and part pig, Piggypine was not supposed to be in this book at all. But he's determined to take over and star in the story, no matter what the artist who drew him says. Will he be allowed to stay?

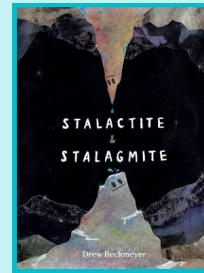

Growing Home by Beth Ferry

The residents of 3 Ramshorn Drive include an agile ivy plant, a fish who eats cheese puffs, and an injured spider. These unlikely companions join forces to save the day in this illustrated chapter book.

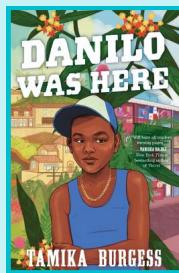

Some of Us by Rajani LaRocca

Poetic language and evocative artwork explore how and why people from all over the world come to this country seeking citizenship: "Some of us are born to it. Some of us choose. And we are all American."

Stalactite and Stalagmite by Drew Beckmeyer

Two tiny cave nubs share their experiences and impressions over millions of years as they grow into a stalactite and a stalagmite, "one tiny drip at a time." A creative and amusing science picture book.

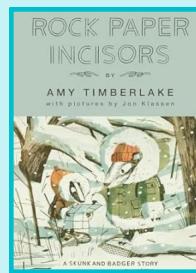

Danilo Was Here by Tamika Burgess

Danilo leaves the chaos of post-invasion Panama in 1989 to join a baseball all-star team in California. His new life is challenging, but it also gives him a chance to search for his father, who came north before Danilo.

Fresh Start by Gale Galligan

Ollie's family moves so often that she knows she'll have to "reset" each time she starts a different school. When her parents buy a house and promise to stay, she finally has the chance to form real and lasting bonds.

Rock, Paper, Incisors by Amy Timberlake

Housemates Skunk and Badger kindly agree to care for two rat pups, but their antics – including barrel-racing and dental floss ziplines – are just too much. A lively look at friendship and extended families.
